Where do i find my device settings app

Ten years ago, losing a phone wasn't a big deal. If you lost your phone, you lost several files and a handful of contacts saved in your phone. Then you can easily get this data from various other sources. However, now is 2019, where losing a phone has become a really big deal. Losing the phone means you're losing everything. It's simple because we rely on our phones for almost everything we do in our lives. From our private messages to our professional documents, all valuable items in our lives are stored on our phones. So we just can't afford to lose this smart gadget that we've relied so much on. Luckily, while using an Android device, you have something called Google Find My Device that helps you find and lock your device in case the device disappears. If you care about your phone's data, you should consider setting up this feature on your device for rainy days. Find devices compatible with my device. Before proceeding, it's important to find out if your Android device is compatible with Finding my device. Although most phones won't have a problem with the feature, there are a few phones that don't support it. The main requirement for this feature is that your device should run Android 4.0 or later. This can be confirmed on your device from Settings > About phone. If you've confirmed that your phone is running this or later version of Android, continue with the rest of this guide. Download and set up Find My Device Find My Device is actually an app available in the official Google Play Store. You need to download it and then configure it to work properly with your Android device. Launch the Google Play Store app on your device and search for and install the Google Find My Device app. Launch, select the Google Account you want to use with the app, and tap Continue As NAME, where the name is the name saved in your Google Account. The app relies on your phone's GPS to find your location. You'll be prompted to allow the app to access your location. Tap Allow to do so. The application is installed and fully configured. You are ready to start using the service. Find your phone via Google Find My device Now it's time to lose your device. You can put your phone in a separate room to get the feeling that you've lost your device and you need to find it. Or give it to your friend, who lives a few blocks away, to make it look more real. After you do this, the following procedure will help you find the device on a map. Open a new tab in your browser and head to the website on my device. As soon as the site loads, it will automatically retrieve your device's current location and see the device's location on the screen. You can click the icon next to your device name to see the last online time for your device. This is useful and tells you the last time your device was connected to the Internet. If you don't want to open a specific site to find your device, you're even find your device using a simple Google search. Just search Google to find my device, and Google will find the device and display it on a map in your search results. Saves you a few clicks. Remote sound playback on your device There are various actions that you can perform from the site Find my device on your phone. One of these is the remote sound playback on your device. If you think your device is in close proximity and you'll be able to find it if it's played sound, you can use the Sound Playback feature. While on the Find my device site, click the Play sound option in the left sidebar. A sound will play on your device to find it. It even works when your phone is in vibration or quiet mode. Add a recovery message and phone number to the device It's really convenient if you think someone will return your device if they know your contact details. Finding my device allows you to display a recovery message and phone number on your device so that when someone finds the device, they know who it belongs to and can contact you. Click Secure Device in the left sidebar, and you'll be able to enter a custom message and phone number to display on your device. I hope someone will read the message and try to contact you to return the device. Remotely delete all data on the device If you have lost all hope of returning the device, you may want to delete all data stored on the device. It must ensure that anyone who accesses your device will not be able to read your data. Click Delete device in the left sidebar to start deleting your device. Note that it will remove all files and settings stored on your device. Also, once the device is deleted, you won't be able to find it using Find My Device. If the device is not connected to the Internet, when you start the deletion procedure, it will start deleting the next time it appears online. Conclusion Although there is no sure way to get your device back once it is lost or stolen, there are a few things you can do to improve the chances of safely returning your device. Find My Device is an excellent feature for finding your device and doing things that make it easier to return your phone. Disney's new streaming service Disney+ is here, giving the likes of Netflix and Amazon Prime some stiff competition. Disney+ offers the full Star Wars catalogue, as well as its new live action series Mandalorian. It has also stocked a huge slab of Disney library of classic animations, films of Marvel Cinematic Universe, including recent releases such as Avengers Endgame and National Geographic Channel. The new subscription video on demand is ready to use on your favorite mobile device. Here's how to set up Disney+ on your iPhone, iPad, or iPod Touch. Disney+ Sign up to Disney+ to stream hundreds of movies and shows Watch new and classic TV shows and movies from Disney, Pixar, Star Wars, Marvel, National Geographic and 21st Century Fox from one Services. Last check June 19, 2020 step 1: Download the Disney+ iOS app from the App Store.Go to the app store on your iPhone, iPad, or iPod Touch and search for the Disney+ app. Click the Get button to install the app on your device. Step 2: Create an account with Disney+You can sign up for a $8.99 per month subscription. There's also an option of $89.99 a year that can help you save about 16% compared to a monthly subscription and equate to about two months for free. If you haven't already set up an account on the Disney+ website, clicking on the monthly or annual subscription buttons in the app will use app store payment details to save you a subscription. If you sign up through the website, you can choose another payment method, such as PayPal or credit card. Step 3: Create user profilesNe least you are the only person in your household using Disney+, it is worth creating separate user profiles for each user. Thus, lists for monitoring and reviewing reverses can be stored separately for each person. Once you're in the app, tap the Mickey Mouse icon in the lower-left corner of the screen. Press the Add Profile button. Select an avatar for the account. Name the profile. Select whether this is a Children's Account. This only allows Disney content that is child-friendly to be viewed by that user. Enable AutoPlay if you want the next episode of a series to play automatically when watching TV. Step 4: Start watching To watch a movie or TV show, just click on the movie or series you want to watch, pick up some popcorn and enjoy. If you're hoping to watch offline, check out our guide on how to download Disney+ titles. Step 5: Stream to the TVCo if you have an Apple TV connected to your TV, you can stream Disney+ from your phone so you can enjoy your content with full sound on the big screen. Tap the AirPlay icon in the top corner of the screen and select your Apple TV from the list of available AirPlay devices. Did this content help you? Whether you're new to Android or have been using Android for a while when you start again with a new device, this helps you have a checklist to help you get started. For your particular Android phone or tablet, the exact menu options may be different, but they should be similar to the steps shown here. The instructions in this article apply to Android 10, Android 9 Pie and Android 8 Oreo. Warrensky/Flickr In the box, you can find a quick setup or a guide to getting started. The guide tells you if you need to insert into a SIM card included in the box in your phone. If your phone has a removable battery, install it. You may need to charge the battery before proceeding. When for the first time phone or tablet, Android takes you through the first steps of starting. Sign in with your Google Account or create a new one to keep your device in sync with Google services for emails, calendars, maps, and more. During setup, connect other services, such as later if you want to log in to your phone as quickly as possible. Answer questions with basic settings, such as what language you use and whether you want to turn on location services. Many apps use location services for actions such as driving directions and local restaurant reviews. Setting up security options can be the most important step of all. Go to your device settings by pressing the Menu button. Select Settings, then scroll down and tap Security. On this screen, you can set a PIN, pattern, or other means of locking your phone or tablet, such as facial recognition or a password. Depending on your device and Android version, you may have other security options, such as encrypting the entire device, which is essential if you're using your phone or tablet to work, and locking your SIM card. If you have the option to enter information about the owner, definitely set it up in case you lose your phone, and a good Samaritan finds it. Set up remote deletion as soon as possible, allowing you to delete all data from your phone or tablet remotely if it's lost or stolen. At this point, connect to your Wi-Fi network. Leaving Wi-Fi all the time will drain your mobile device's battery life, but when you're at home or a known wireless network, it's best to use Wi-Fi. Go back to Settings from the Menu button, then go to Wireless & Networks and tap Wi-Fi. Enable Wi-Fi and tap the wireless network name. Enter the network password, if any, and you're ready to scroll through it. There are thousands of Android apps to download. Here are a few suggestions to get started with your new Android smartphone or tablet. Recommended apps include Evernote for taking notes, Microsoft Office file editing documents, Skype for free video calls and instant messaging, and Wifi Analyzer to help you improve your wireless network. Three others to consider are mobile security and antivirus protection of Avast, GasBuddy (because we can all stand to save on gas) and Camera ZOOM FX Premium, an impressive camera app for Android. If you use your phone or tablet to catch up on news and websites, Google News - Weather, Flipboard and Pocket are popular. You'll find all these apps and much more in the Google Play store formerly known as Google Market. You can (and maybe install apps on your phone or tablet from your laptop or desktop from the Google Play website. Luis Alvarez/Getty Images Android offers many customization features. Here are the basics of customizing your Home screen and device: Your Android device comes with multiple home screen panels. Swipe right or left to access them. For remove an app from one of the screens, but don't delete it entirely, tap the app, and hold it for a few seconds until you see a Recycle Bin icon at the bottom of the screen. Drag the app to the Recycle Bin to remove it. To add an app to one of the screens, tap the Apps icon, and then tap the app you want to add for a long time. Drag it to the panel you want to turn it on. You can also add folders to a screen. Tap a long blank space on the screen and select Folders. Depending on your system, you may be able to set up not only a primary folder to contain the apps, but also specific folders, such as All Contacts or Recent Documents. Move apps to a folder by dragging them with your finger. To add a drawing object or shortcut or change the wallpaper, long press an empty space on the screen.
